Nahuatl, SPECLANG 101A

FALL QUARTER
2017

Classes start on 9/26/2017

Taught by
Eduardo de la Cruz (Instituto de Docencia e Investigación Etnológica de Zacatecas, IDIEZ)

First quarter of a three-quarter beginning sequence designed to introduce students to the Nahuatl language or lengua mexicana as it is spoken today.

Distance learning combined with periodic on-site instruction, conducted primarily in Nahuatl. Course emphasizes developing effective communication at a basic level, covering grammatical structures, vocabulary, and sentence patterns through speaking, reading, writing, and listening in everyday situations. Nahuatl culture.

Some knowledge of Spanish is necessary.

Eduardo de la Cruz is a native Nahuatl-language speaker from the Huasteca region of Mexico who has been teaching his language to international students for several years.

For more information contact esaenz@stanford.edu or eprionas@stanford.edu

This course is funded by the U.S. Department of Education Title VI grant. The Center for Latin American Studies is a Title VI Foreign Language Area Studies fellowship center that supports the instruction and learning of lesser commonly taught languages spoken in Latin America, and a National Resource Center for research and teaching on the region.